

ANCIENT IFIELD

Today Ifield Millpond, split into southern and northern ponds when the Arun Valley railway line was constructed during the 1840s and home to many species of water birds, is considered to be the most important wetland site in Crawley. As a consequence it has been designated as a Site of Nature Conversation Importance and if you're really lucky, you may catch sight of a Kingfisher. A growing population of Cormorants, a small group of Herons, Swans, Moorhens, Coots, Grebes and many different species of Gulls, Ducks and Geese all call Ifield Millpond home.

Kingfisher courtesy and copyright of Dale Baldwin. Text and other photographs courtesy and copyright of Ian Mulcahy www.iansapps.co.uk

www.ifieldparishmap.org